PLACES YOU WILL BE VISITING

Blending learning with culture

Our SHIP will take you on a journey to discover...

Cádiz province

Cadiz province has some of Andalucia's most windswept beaches, prettiest white villages, and the most celebrated Spanish wine: Sherry.

Its coastline has long been peppered with fishing ports that were established by the Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans. Today, the Cadiz coast is a mecca for windsurfers, birdwatchers, and anyone who prefers a wilder shoreline with relatively few beachgoers, compared to the busier Costa del Sol.

Cádiz city

The “Tacita del Plata” is considered the oldest city in the Western World. It was founded (in 1100 B.C.) by the Phoenicians, a seafaring people who turned Gadir into an important trading colony where the Carthaginians, the Romans, the Visigoths and the Muslims would all subsequently settle. An open, cosmopolitan city, its port was chosen by Columbus as the point of departure for his second voyage to the New World.

The city would then become, after the decline of Seville, the port to The Indies, drawing the flow of trade with the American Continent. This frantic commercial activity then brought about an era of economic, cultural splendour, when Baroque palaces with their characteristic towers offering amazing views were built.

PLACES YOU WILL BE VISITING

Blending learning with culture

Our SHIP will take you on a journey to discover...

San Fernando

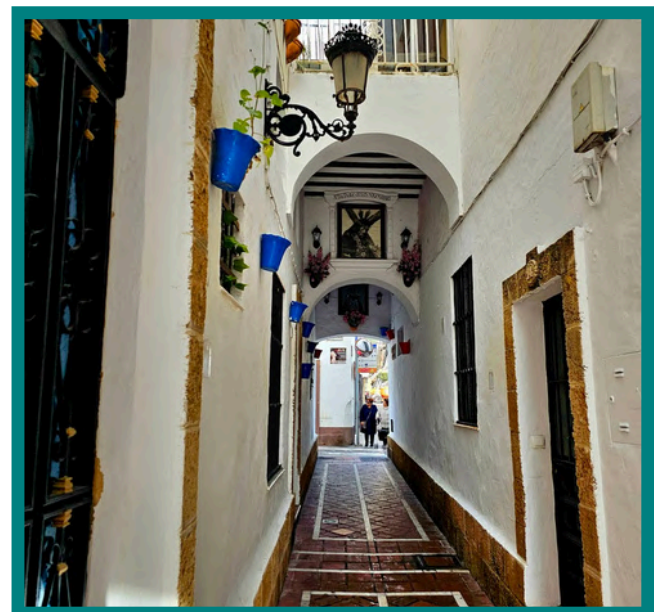

The majority of the town's municipal areas, featuring mud flats, dunes, and stunning beaches, are encompassed within the Bahía de Cádiz Natural Park. Over time, these mud flats have been repurposed into salt pans, marshes, and in some cases, fish farms, contributing significantly to the preservation of their natural beauty.

The roots of present-day San Fernando trace back to the establishment of the San Carlos military base, which intertwined the town's destiny with naval affairs. Consequently, numerous structures from that era still stand today, including the Temple of Illustrious Seamen, the Church, the Royal Astronomical Observatory, and the Town Hall.

Like Cadiz city, its origins are steeped in mythology, yet archaeological discoveries on its grounds unveil traces of Punic, Roman, and Arab settlements. It served not only as a recreational hub for the landowners of these civilizations but also housed pottery industries, evidenced by the recent discovery of numerous furnaces. Nevertheless, it is renowned as the earliest urban settlement built around a Carenero, located in the place of Puente, the city's primitive name, alongside a castle named San Romualdo, whose ruins are currently undergoing restoration.

Under Muslim rule for over five centuries, the city was eventually incorporated into the crown of Castile by Fernando III.

PLACES YOU WILL BE VISITING

Blending learning with culture

Our SHIP will take you on a journey to discover...

Jerez de la Frontera

There are few places in Spain which can lay claim to international recognition enjoyed by Jerez. Thanks to its wine, “jerez” or “sherry”, the equestrian tradition, the bulls, flamenco and motor-racing, this Andalusian town’s name has been known far and wide for many years.

the most important Al-Andalus feature is the Alcázar de Jerez, which is situated within the walled enclosure of the Mosque, the Arab Baths and the Olive Garden, with its cisterns and fountains which are in perfect harmony with the Baroque palace of Villavencio, built upon the ruins of the original Islamic palace, with a tower where the visitor can find the original Camera Obscura.

Chiclana de la Frontera

Located in the Bay of Cádiz, this town showcases sandy terrain, pine-covered plains, and remnants of cork oak groves like El Pago del Humo. Most of the area is within the Cadiz Bay Natural Park, featuring the Sancti Petri Marshes Beauty Spot.

The Chiclana Marsh Complex, a Nature Reserve, lies outside the park. La Barrosa beach is a highlight along the coast.
